

While many are currently looking at the short-term turbulences in the global capital markets, entirely new opportunities are opening up for investors in China. This was the central message of the webinar of the Sino-German Center on May 18 with three distinguished panellists. „We see in the current situation that the importance of China as a stabilising factor for the world economy is growing. What’s more, the liberalisation of Chinese markets offers huge opportunities for foreign investors“, Werner Steinmüller, Board Member of Deutsche Bank, stated. Florence Lee, Head of China Business Development HSBC, stated that international fund managers are going to benefit from further liberalisation enhancements: “With the abolishment of the QFII / RQFII investment quotas the Chinese market is becoming even more attractive for global fund managers and asset owners.” Last but not least, Dr Han Chen, Co-CEO of CEINEX, emphasized that “China not only offers investment opportunities but also a great potential for diversification in terms of portfolio theory.” In his view, the attractiveness of the Chinese onshore market will be supported by a systematic opening in the years to come. The event that was joined by around one hundred participants was moderated by the Co-CEO’s of the Sino-German Center at Frankfurt School, Prof. Horst Löchel and Prof. Rüdiger von Rosen.
